AGRICULTURE & FORESTRY

The Agriculture & Forestry sector is nothing new as this sector has been a round since the beginning of human settlement on the continent. The forest remains one of the most important natural assets on this planet, a renewable resource representing an enormous economic value. But the forest also has a great effect on the environment such as erosion, climate and animal life. We have for many years experienced that the deforestation has accelerated alarmingly, giving the natural reforestation no chance of recovering. With this continuing even more dramatic changes for human and animal life are to be expected. The processes of seed cleaning and plant production are crucial phases in order to become a successful grower. Planting trees properly is not an exception! Even though an exceptionally fine work has been performed in the nursery stage it can unfortunately be ruined if planting is not made with caution and precision.
